GOOD MAY BE SECRETARY OF WAR HEAD

INDICATIONS POINT TO HENRY
W. ROBINSON AS SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

DONOVAN, WHO WISHED TO BE
ATTORNEY-GENERAL, REJECTS
TWO OTHER PROFFERS

By THOMAS L. STOKES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Feb. 28.—President-elect Hoover expected to complete his cabinet today, put the finishing touches on his inauguration address, and turn his mind definitely to that hour when he will stand before the massed thousands in front of the capitol Monday and take the oath of office as president.

But two cabinet positions remain to be filled, according to Mr. Hoover's close associates. Negotiations under way for filling these two places were expected to be completed today.

Unless there is a last minute hitch James W. Good, Chicago, lawyer, will be secretary of war, and strong indications point to Henry W. Robinson, Los Angeles banker and close friend of Mr. Hoover, as secretary of commerce.

These busy days of cabinet conferences have brought forward the "unpleasant incident" that a new president usually encounters during his early days in office.

This was the episode centering about William J. Donovan, the "Wild Bill" of world war days, one of Mr. Hoover's chief campaign lieutenants, whose life's ambition was to be attorney general, and when this was denied him, rejected the war portfolio and the governor generalship of the Philippines.

The 46-year-old assistant attorney general announced he will go back into private life. He and Mr. Hoover parted good friends. Donovan will conduct himself as a "good soldier."

Filling the attorney generalship will be William D. Mitchell, solicitor general, who still contends that he is an "old-fashioned independent democrat," despite efforts of Mr. Hoover and his close associates to remove the party label from him by pointing out that he voted for Hughes in 1916, Coolidge in 1924, and Hoover in 1928.

James W. Good, former Iowa congressman and director of Hoover's western campaign, has accepted the post of secretary of war.

The Hoover cabinet stands as follows:

Secretary of state—Henry L. Stimson of New York.

Secretary of treasury—Andrew W. Mellon of Pennsylvania.

Secretary of war—James W. Good of Iowa.

Secretary of navy—Charles Francis Adams of Massachusetts.

Attorney general—William D. Mitchell of Minnesota.

Postmaster-general—Walter F. Brown of Ohio.

Secretary of agriculture—uncertain.

Secretary of interior—Ray Lyman Wilbur of California.

Secretary of commerce—uncertain.

Secretary of labor—James J. Davis of Pennsylvania.

Secretary of labor and secretary of agriculture still are indefinite. The spotlight was centered yesterday for the agriculture post on Dante Pierce, Des Moines, Iowa, farm paper publisher.

William N. Doak, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, still is mentioned most prominently for secretary of labor.

Washington, Feb. 28.—President-elect Hoover completed selection of his cabinet today, it was announced at his headquarters here.

Secretary of Labor Davis, it was learned on good authority, is to be retained temporarily as head of the labor department, because of Mr. Hoover's difficulty in filling this post.

The only cabinet members not definitely known are secretary of commerce and secretary of agriculture although these two places have been filled within the last few hours.

PLOT CHARGED TO ASSASSINATE PRES. MACHADO

TO OVERTHROW CUBAN GOVERNMENT, FORCE U. S. INTERVENTION

PLOT REVEALED BY JUDICIAL CHIEF OF POLICE OF HAVANA

Havana, Feb. 28.—(U.P.)—An extensive search continued through Cuba and in the United States today for persons accused of being involved in a plot to assassinate President Gerardo Machado, overthrow the Cuban government, and force United States military intervention in affairs of the Philippines.

The plot was revealed by Alfonso Fors, judicial chief of police of Havana, who charged 73 persons with complicity and was granted search warrants for them.

Some of the accused were arrested yesterday but the majority still were at large today. Among the latter was Gustavo Machado Morales, a cousin of the president.

Fors revealed the plot dramatically when he appeared unexpectedly in court with a large bundle of papers and announced he had unearthed a scheme to assassinate President Machado and bring about a nationwide revolution.

Fors said the plot had ramifications throughout Cuba and extended to foreign countries. He produced several printed papers to support his assertions.

GREAT NORTHERN PAYS HALF A MILLION OF BACK TAXES TO STATE

St. Paul, Feb. 28.—(U.P.)—Minnesota's long fight to collect approximately $500,000 in back taxes from the Great Northern railway ended today when the railroad, by order of the United States supreme court, paid the sum to the state treasurer. The $536,402 payment represented taxes and interest on disputed items from 1903 to 1912 which had been fought over five times in court.

He betrayed no surprise, said he had never professed to be anything but a democrat, but said he had sometimes voted independently in the Minnesota political battles.

Youngquist Submits to Governor Desire for Sweeping Changes in Minnesota's Dry Laws

SMASH BIG BOOTLEGGERS AND SPEAKEASIES

LEAVE THE SMALL TIME OFFENSES TO THE LOCAL AUTHORITIES

ATTORNEY GENERAL DRAWS UP 5 BILLS, CARRYING RECOMMENDATIONS

St. Paul, Feb. 28.—(U.P.)—G. A. Youngquist, Minnesota attorney general today submitted to Governor Theodore Christianson recommendations for sweeping changes in the state's dry laws which would smash the big bootlegger and the speakeasy operator and leave the small time offender to local authorities.

Youngquist drew up five bills, which were given the sanction of Andrew J. Volstead, author of the national dry law, and if approved by the governor they will be recommended to the state legislature.

Chief among the provisions of the bills were: that operation of a speakeasy be made a gross misdemeanor; mere possession of more than one quart of liquor be punishable regardless of the purpose for which it was held; elastic punishment powers be given judges to discriminate between the "repeater" and the first offender, and make transportation of liquor in a motor car a felony for the second offense.

The attorney general also recommended that municipal judges be empowered to hear liquor cases to relieve the district and federal court burden.

Most of the recommendations were voiced here in January during a statewide conference of law enforcement officers.

Paris, Feb. 28.—(U.P.)—Injections of milk to combat uraemia and injections of camphor to strengthen the heart were given to Marshal Ferdinand Foch today as his doctors struggled to bring him through the fourth crisis of his grave illness.

His condition was stationary after a quiet night and his temperature somewhat lower, but the doctors were worried by his extreme weakness, which left him incapable of taking food.

The physicians issued a bulletin which said the marshal's condition was "satisfactory" with the temperature 99.32 and the pulse 88.

Dr. Laubrie, one of the attending physicians, said:

COL. LINDBERGH AND MISS MORROW DELUGED WITH CONGRATULATIONS

ESCAPED WHEN THEIR CRIPPLED PLANE OVERTURNED IN LANDING

Mexico City, Feb. 28.—(U.P.)—Shaken, but miraculously alive and well, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Miss Anne Morrow were deluged today with the congratulations of the world on their escape when their crippled plane overturned in landing here yesterday. Lindbergh's dislocated shoulder had been set and seemed to be inconveniencing him little.

The congratulations that poured in by cable and telegraph were not alone for their escape, but for the amazing coolness and skill with which Lindbergh again demonstrated his prowess as a flier.

"When we land, we'll overturn, don't be afraid," Lindbergh told his fiancée calmly when he discovered in mid-air that their plane had lost a wheel. It was disclosed on good authority today.

Then the flier who has faced death many times in the air and had few rivals in thrilling parachute escapes while a mail flier, placed the girl in the rear, tucked cushions around her to ensure her safety, and devoted himself to the dangerous task of landing on one wheel and the tail skid.

It was an inspiring example of coolness and devotion. The frightened girl had the comforting assurance that the world's most skillful pilot was trying to bring her through.

Lindbergh accomplished it. Although he himself was injured in the smashup, the precautions he had taken saved his fiancée from more than fright and shock. The plane overturned and was partly wrecked.

Lindbergh was tossed violently against the side of the plane, his shoulder wrenched and his wrist hurt, but he crawled from the wreckage and helped his fiancée climb through a window, hiding the fact that he was hurt.

The young couple started from Valbuena field at 11:45 A. M. on a little jaunt of their own, refusing to tell where they were going. They carried sandwiches, however, some of which were eaten en route, so it appeared they had come down somewhere for a picnic lunch.

Apparently in taking off again, the right wheel struck soft ground or some obstruction and was torn off. When Lindbergh discovered it, he realized the seriousness of their plight and turned back to Valbuena field, which afforded the best possible place for a landing with a damaged undercarriage.

The plane, City of Wichita, flew back over the field a little more than three hours after leaving. As the plane came closer, Lindbergh was seen sending a distress signal with his arm. Aviation officers discovered the missing wheel and answered the signal.

Lindbergh dropped down, leveled off skillfully and skimmed over the ground attempting to break his speed and touch lightly on the one good wheel.

The plane came down smoothly about 500 yards from the main hangars and for a moment it seemed Lindbergh had accomplished the difficult feat. But luck was against him. Either the wing on the right side gave way under the strain or

PASSES HOUSE LATE WEDNESDAY BY VOTE 80 TO 31

NOW AWAITS SIGNATURE OF GOVERNOR CHRISTIANSON

COUNTIES MAY ACT, PROVIDING FOR PERSONS OVER 70, RESIDENTS 15 YEARS

By HECTOR PERIER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

St. Paul, Feb. 28.—An old age pension system which may abolish the Minnesota poor house was provided by a legislative measure which awaited the signature of Governor Theodore Christianson today following its passage in the house late Wednesday by a vote of 80 to 31.

The measure provides that counties may institute a pension system by which all needy persons over 70 years of age who have lived in the county for 15 years would be paid $1 a day.

Representative Hannah Kempfer of Erhard presented a strong argument for the bill's passage when she said that it was a shame to separate the old pioneer couples who had played so fine a part in the building of Minnesota by placing them in different old persons' institutions.

The bill had already passed the senate.

Mrs. Kempfer also had a major part in the passage of a house bill which would abolish the state fishing zone system which separates the northern and southern parts of Minnesota. She said it was unfair to permit fishing in one part of the state earlier in the season than in another part of the state.

Other developments included: Passage in the house of a bill that would lighten up the laws concerning issuance of personal checks without sufficient bank funds.

Introduction of a bill in the house which would abolish the state disabled war veterans' camps and employ the money for direct aid to needy veterans.

Passage of several bills in the house which would provide creation of a department of planning in cities of the second, third and fourth class and villages to regulate location, size, height and use of all buildings.

A bill which would repeal the law which gives preference to Minnesota materials in the construction of public buildings was approved by the house.

A bill was passed by the house which would authorize the state board of health to grant brief paroles to prisoners in state institutions to be accompanied by guards to any part of the state, the prisoner to pay his own expenses and those of his guard.

Introduction of a house bill which provides the creation of a department of conservation, the seven members of which would be appointed by the governor with the consent of the senate and to serve without pay.

the plane hit an obstruction and dipped.

The big Travelair plowed into the ground and flipped over in a great cloud of dust.

As the first of the crowd reached the smashed plane, Lindbergh was just crawling painfully to the ground.

"Are you hurt, colonel?" he was asked.

Lindbergh's reply was astonishing. The quiet humor for which he is noted came to the fore.

He grinned, attempted to assume an air of dignity and replied:

"I have nothing to say."

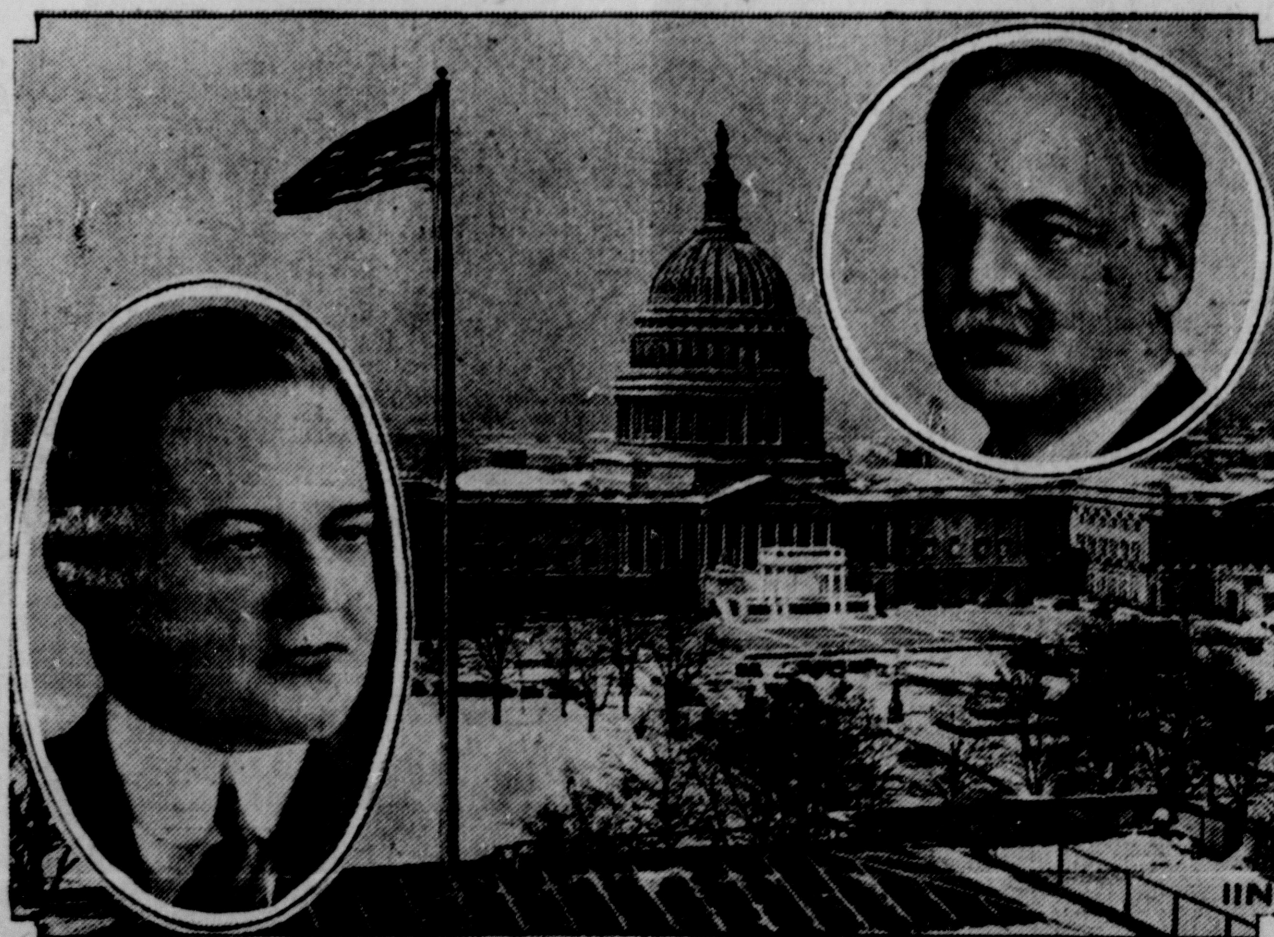

Lindbergh then turned to helping Miss Morrow through the window. She was trembling and extremely pale, but he laughed and said something reassuring as he supported her.

In a few minutes they entered the Morrow limousine and started for the embassy. Miss Morrow, still unrecovered from her fright, huddled against Lindbergh's shoulder as the car drove off.

Miss Morrow's only comment when questioned by reporters was to look appealingly at her fiancée and say: "Augustus will speak for me."

She thus revealed for the first time her private name for the flier, using his seldom-heard middle name. It was the first serious accident (Continued on Page 4)

PUPILS IN PIANO RECITAL

Talented Students of Mrs. W. A. M. Johnstone to be Heard

AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Five Appearing March 13, Wm. McClenahan, and Misses Brandt, Halliday, LeMire, Allbright

Many remember with great pleasure the piano recital given last year in the First Congregational church by the talented pupils of Mrs. W. A. M. Johnstone.

Preparations are now well nigh completed for another such program to be given March 13.

One pupil, William McClenahan, will appear for the first time this year, in addition to the four who gave last year's concert. Edythe Brandt of Pillager; Virginia Halliday of Staples; Bernice LeMire of Pequot and Kathryn Allbright of Brainerd.

Another year of intensive practice under their splendid teacher has advanced these young pianists noticeably.

Concerto movements or brilliant solo numbers will be on the program. Some will be accompanied by a second piano and one by the organ. Solos, duos and eight hand pieces will be given as last year.

It is seldom that a teacher even in the large cities has a quintet of such talented and advanced pupils under her instruction at one time. Brainerd is very fortunate in being able to hear this type of works for the piano.

THE KNOT HOLE

Vol. 3 THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1929 No. 41

Published for the information and entertainment of the home-loving folks in Brainerd and vicinity by the Standard Lumber Co. Paul H. Schultdt, Editor.

Have the last few days given you any symptoms of spring fever? If they have just come in and we will go over the plans for that new house with you.

Mrs. Ikey: "Dat vanishing cream is all von big fake."

Mrs. Izzy: "Vhy you theenk so?"

Mrs. Ikey: "Well, I been using it on my nose six months and it's as long as it ever vas."

We are unloading a fresh car of Idaho White Pine today and Bill the yardman came into the office and told us confidentially that it was the best car of pine that he has ever had the pleasure to unload. Bill has unloaded a bunch of them in his day. If you don't believe it ask him.

Uncle Ned says she's a nice girl that walks in her sleep when she dreams of auto rides.

At the auditor's request we made out a list of the different uses of Presdwood today. After we had them all written down we counted them and found we had 56 different uses. Surely one of these uses will answer your requirements. Come in and see what they are.

Jim: Lend me five dollars, will you. I promise on the word of a gentleman that I will pay it back next week.

Bill: Bring the gentleman around and let's see him.

It is easy enough to look pleasant

When your wife signs your name to a check,

But the man worth while, is the man who can smile,

When his wife shaves the back of his neck.

"Please pardon my frown...but someone in the studio just coughed...and spoiled our love scene"

"They've often called the movies 'the silent drama.' But there isn't much silence during the making of a movie.

"It's in the making of a 'Talkie' that studio silence is required. No one is allowed to make any noise, but the players. For the slightest sound in the studio registers on the sensitive recording mechanism. And an uninvited cough is a calamity.

"The other day someone coughed during the recording of a love scene. Since then OLD GOLDS are the order of the day. For as all Hollywood knows, there's not a cough in a film-ful."

PUPILS IN PIANO RECITAL

Talented Students of Mrs. W. A. M. Johnstone to be Heard

AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Five Appearing March 13, Wm. McClenahan, and Misses Brandt, Halliday, LeMire, Allbright

Many remember with great pleasure the piano recital given last year in the First Congregational church by the talented pupils of Mrs. W. A. M. Johnstone.

Preparations are now well nigh completed for another such program to be given March 13.

One pupil, William McClenahan, will appear for the first time this year, in addition to the four who gave last year's concert. Edythe Brandt of Pillager; Virginia Halliday of Staples; Bernice LeMire of Pequot and Kathryn Allbright of Brainerd.

Another year of intensive practice under their splendid teacher has advanced these young pianists noticeably.

Concerto movements or brilliant solo numbers will be on the program. Some will be accompanied by a second piano and one by the organ. Solos, duos and eight hand pieces will be given as last year.

It is seldom that a teacher even in the large cities has a quintet of such talented and advanced pupils under her instruction at one time. Brainerd is very fortunate in being able to hear this type of works for the piano.

SOUTH LONG LAKE

HEALTH SERVICE

EVERY car owner gives his car frequent overhauls and listens intently when a new squeak is developed. But his own body, we mean his personal frame, and not the car's, is usually neglected. He goes to a doctor or surgeon only when pain is in evidence.

The new and growing idea these days is conservation of health and periodic examinations. It is cheaper and easier to ward off illness than to doctor and cure it when it attaches itself to one's system.

Many great life insurance companies educate their policy holders in health protection. Many of the fraternal insurance companies recognize this fact too. The Maccabees, for instance, recognizing the value of these periodic health tests have adopted a resolution authorizing a free urinalysis for all members of the association during the month in which their birthday falls.

Dr. J. C. Hanchett, medical director of the society, says that in his early years of medical practice it was a frequent jest for some patient to tell him that he thought the Chinese method of paying his physician for keeping him well was the correct method for a physician to collect for his services, rather than the prevailing custom of charging him when he was ill. Few of us realized at that time how soon we would be following this Chinese custom to the extent of advocating at least one health examination each year for everyone.

The following extract is from the December issue of Medical Insurance:

"Physical examinations necessary. More and more physicians are urging periodic examinations as the most important step in the preservation of health. In fact, this is being recommended as the most essential step toward maintaining that state of health so necessary to the enjoyment of life as well as life's preservation beyond the average period of longevity."

"Physical examinations at stated periods are a safeguard against the encroachment of disease. They show the weakness of the body and the unguarded points of attack of incipient diseases. They enable the individual to be on the aggressive, rather than on the defensive, in preventing successful attacks upon the physical system. Regular physical examinations are the scientific way of keeping fit as against the old haphazard way of waiting until the patient is down and at least partially disabled for the combat with the disease enemy. Gradually we are learning in medicine that 'an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.'"

EDITORIAL ANONYMITY

FOR a few hours in Louisville the other night Harrison Robertson emerged from his anonymity as chief editorial writer for the Courier-Journal, says the New York Times. He was the guest of honor at a banquet which his associate gave to mark the completion of his half century on the paper. Still vigorous, enthusiastic and as distinguished a stylist as in the days when his work was so often mistaken for that of his famous editor, Henry Watterson, Mr. Robertson dismissed laments upon the nameless character of his life's labors with the following:

I realize that 50 years of my life lie buried in the editorial columns of the Courier-Journal's musty files.

My consolation is that while the newspaper dies physically every day, and with it dies what we have written into it; its spirit, if we have endowed it with a spirit, is undying; its character, which is all that counts, survives.

The sincere newspaper worker finds this a true expression of his creed. In no other profession is there a more unselfish code. Few in Louisville know of Mr. Robertson, as few in New York city knew of Frank Cobb of the World, but the knowledge that they offered leadership in thought to thousands to whom editors are but a few printed words was what they thrived upon.

IF STOPPED

"WHAT would be the reaction upon the cost of living if advertising ceased and its beneficent force were stopped?" This question, asked by the Fourth Estate, provides much food for rumination.

It is an interesting conjecture. Advertising largely takes the place of personal selling effort, which is very much more expensive.

A California editor cogitating on the possibility of a cessation of advertising says:

"It would mean that our railroad trains would be thronged with salesmen whose homeward bound mail would carry fewer orders, all of smaller volume than now."

"Distribution upon the present scale would be impossible. Manufacturing would fall off, with a consequent decrease in labor demand. Jobbers would find their business proportionally limited. Retailers would make fewer and slower turnovers. Prices of all commodities would take a rise that would make war prices and ante-war prices seem low by comparison."—Hennepin County Review.

TARIFF TINKERING

A GENERAL revision of the tariff is not to be desired this year, says the Anoka Herald. The proposed special session of congress if called by Mr. Hoover after his inauguration should be devoted to but one purpose, namely, farm relief.

Correction of certain items in the tariff schedule may well prove helpful to the farmer if they are confined to those commodities imported from abroad which compete with American farm produce or things manufactured from such produce.

Such a correction would tend to lift the farming business to a parity with other businesses.

Obviously a general revision increasing the tariff walls on all imports would leave the farmer no better off than he is at present.

The President-elect knows this as well as anybody and can be relied upon.

ALL the winter building going on at Brainerd has attracted the attention of the whole state. If Brainerd is doing heavy work when the thermometer is 20 below, what will the town do when the usual spring and summer building season gets under way.

CHICAGO is bragging about its quiet city election. No one was murdered, kidnaped or slugged.

Impatient Griselda

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

WHEN Irene Robeline married Guinn Holden, the young and handsome Texas minister, she expected to win his love. Guinn, a year before, had married the beautiful blonde Lilith, a gay and coquettish girl, who boasted of her ability to win him. Lilith died at childbirth. For eighteen years Irene fought a secret battle to root out the "gold and white" ghost of Guinn's first wife. She was a splendid mother to the second Lilith, who grew up with all the beauty of the first as well as a cold, selfish, spoiled character. Tina, Ross, Lundy and Patricia, Irene's children, were always secondary to Lilith with Holden. Tina wore her cast-off clothes and used her old books in college. After graduation Lilith became engaged to Roger Devereaux, son of wealthy parents. Later she postponed her marriage and persuaded her father to give her a year in New York studying voice with the $2,000 left him by a parish-toner. She was ecstatically happy in the big city, especially after meeting Vivien Winthrop, who entertained her in her palatial home. Bill Chester, heir to millions, and engaged to an heiress, is attracted to Lilith, whose beauty is ravishing. Back home Tina is graduating from college and Irene suffers utmost humiliation when Guinn fails to give her a graduation present. Later Tina has a house party. Sheba, the colored cook and Roger Devereaux has a "hoodoo." Dan Ripley, rich, young, handsome, married from a trip, spends time with Tina, who works at her drawing and helps at home. Irene discovers that Tina is in love with Dan.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XL.

LILITH in New York was living in a state of mind that might be called imbecile optimism, though she did not think of it as that, nor did she call it faith. Lilith was not a religious person. She would have analyzed it as a rational confidence in her own charms and in her intelligence as to directing them. In the past, such assurance had been well founded, and so she had a blithe conviction that that agreeable state would continue. Lilith would have said that faith without work was dead, and while she was not keen for manual exertion, she had no prejudice against using her brains when they would redound to her benefit. She was well aware that she had a good mind, one that had not been overtaken by any such inconsequentialities as college studies, so that it was keen and ready for use.

She had had healthy scorn for Tina's studiousness, as having been senseless and unnecessary. Professors were only men, after all, those of them that weren't old maids, so that the immemorial wiles of a pretty girl could help her in acquiring a bachelor's or a doctor's degree. College had seemed more amusing than the paragonage, so she had spent four years at it, but for higher education in itself there was no lure for Lilith. Voice study, yes, because singing was an attractive accomplishment that gave a pretty girl a place of importance at the piano, that showed off graceful bare arms, permitted lovely, tapering fingers to stray over the keys, while young men looked over the piano in attitudes of devotion, that allowed blue eyes to be uplifted roughly or sentimentally, as the mood of the song fitted. She knew that her voice was pleasing, with an odd power of excitement, able to evoke strange and heady emotions in her hearers, especially the young and masculine ones. That was a quaint thing about music, that a voice could convey to others passions, emotions, depths of desire or despair which the singer did not feel. Lilith could sing a love song and be aware of the electricity it shot through the young men bending attentively over the piano, yet be as cool as a scientist observing reactions in a test tube, so far as she herself was concerned.

She thought of herself as an electrical engineer, of a sort. She could play with fiery currents, yet never had her cool pink fingertips been even slightly scorched. "I guess I've got an asbestos heart," she told herself. "It's safer not to feel thrills yourself. Just as it's safer for an engineer driving a train not to be intoxicated," she mused. And yet thrills must be exciting and pleasurable—she felt oddly regretful at the thought of her immunity. But a cool heart and a clear head got a girl further along in the world.

she filmed for herself fairy pictures of luxury and beauty, where not only would hearts be hers for her choice (that had always been so), but where great houses and pictures and gardens, lawns sloping down to cool lakes, yachts graceful as birds, all imaginable beauty that wealth could procure would be spread out before her.

And why not—since what girl could be more fitted to lend grace and charm to possessions than she, Lilith Holden?

Vivien Winthrop went to Switzerland soon after her house party, and Lilith missed her greatly, not only for her companionship, but for the social backing which the Winthrops had given her. But she was to come home in the Autumn, and she had made plans that should include Lilith in her pleasures. In early June the Deans, too, decided that a Summer in Europe was desirable, so Lilith was faced with the necessity to look out for herself. She couldn't afford to keep the little apartment alone, and besides that would not be advisable. For a Bohemian artist, yes, but for a girl who was aspiring to social success, no. She was canny enough to hunt a furnished room for herself in a quite respectable apartment, before she discussed the matter with anyone.

She confided her acuteness to Bill Chester one afternoon when he took her for a ride in his motorboat on the Hudson.

"I don't plan for myself, the family will jerk me back to the paragonage—by the mercy of the Ladies' Aid, whose dispositions are so good, and to a set of deacons whose minds are moldy. I'll have to help with the Cradle Roll, and teach a class in Sunday school, and take up collections for foreign missions."

"Ghastly!" he agreed, with a shake of his handsome head, humor in his dark eyes. "Hustle up and get moved, and then make 'em see how all right it is."

"I'll have a plausible pen." "I'll say you have! And a plausible tongue and eye!" His own eyes paid tribute to her ability.

"And I must finish my pleasure year. It shows a weak character, doesn't it, to start something and not see it through?"

"It's most immoral," he assured her, with a gay quirk of his boyish mouth.

"Of course, being this far away from my family simplifies things."

"I think families ought to be abolished," he declared with heat.

"Or else separated by law. My mother tries to gobble up my life when I'm with her. Penalty of my being the only child, you know. And my grandfather tries to make me over into his image."

"What's he like?" she asked with interest.

"He's a tall man, big, with white hair and a beaked nose and tired eyes, like a sick old eagle on a rock. Has a contempt for lesser birds, so that makes life mighty lonesome for him. My mother, now, is a pretty parakeet, gay, talkative, loves to flirt about."

"I think my mother was a bird of paradise," mused Lilith. "My stepmother is a dooryard hen, with a brood of chickens to cuckoo to."

"Sounds sort of comfortable." There was a hint of wistfulness in his tone, a sudden seriousness in his glance.

"You'd like her," Lilith said. "Everybody does, all the men especially. Every silly boy going up Fool Hill turns his mind inside out to her like a youngster spilling his rockets to show her his treasures. She can make him believe in himself, think he can do big things. Every tottery old man throws out his chest and grows taller as she follies him. Makes him think he has done big things—even if he knows he hasn't, and never can."

"How does she manage it? I've never known anyone like that."

to Lindbergh since he made his flight from New York to Paris and was transferred from a little-known air mail pilot to the world's most famous aviator.

In his earlier days, however, Lindbergh figured in some of the most thrilling mishaps in the annals of the air. He plunged from crippled or burning air mail planes four times by parachute, and while a student officer, crashed with a fellow student in mid-air.

The City of Wichita carried no parachutes on yesterday's flight.

Field officials said after examining the wrecked plane that the escape of Lindbergh and Miss Morrow had been most narrow. The metal propeller was bent, the end of one wing smashed, the motor torn from its support, part of the rudder and one fin broken, and the fabric of the cabin damaged.

Lindbergh and Miss Morrow reached the embassy at 3:30 P. M., half an hour after the smashup. At 4:30, Dr. Sidney Ulfelder, an American, was called to the embassy. He found Miss Morrow suffering only from shock, but Lindbergh in pain with a dislocated shoulder, of which he tried to make light.

Dr. Ulfelder found it impractical to give an anesthetic at the embassy, so Lindbergh was driven to the Lady Cowdray hospital, where an anesthetic was administered and the shoulder reset. He then returned to the embassy.

Then, to demonstrate further that "it wasn't an accident, but a mishap," as he had protested to reporters at the field, Lindbergh left the embassy at 6:20 with his fiancée and her sister, Miss Elizabeth Morrow, and motored to Valbuena to inspect the plane.

After a brief visit the party motored back to the embassy, carrying various articles left behind in the plane. They included several empty paper sacks labelled "White Castle hamburgers."

One of the first questions asked Lindbergh after the crash was where they had been. He merely replied, "We lost a wheel taking off at a nearby field."

The mystery of where the pair actually went on their trip may never be solved. A check of nearby places failed to disclose any clue to where they lost the wheel.

Lindbergh will be able to fly again in a short time. Dr. Ulfelder said:

"The injury is not serious—just a dislocated shoulder. I told him to keep quiet. He's a great fellow."

HEALTH SERVICE

EVERY car owner gives his car frequent overhauls and listens intently when a new squeak is developed. But his own body, we mean his personal frame, and not the car's, is usually neglected. He goes to a doctor or surgeon only when pain is in evidence.

The new and growing idea these days is conservation of health and periodic examinations. It is cheaper and easier to ward off illness than to doctor and cure it when it attaches itself to one's system.

Many great life insurance companies educate their policy holders in health protection. Many of the fraternal insurance companies recognize this fact too. The Maccabees, for instance, recognizing the value of these periodic health tests have adopted a resolution authorizing a free urinalysis for all members of the association during the month in which their birthday falls.

Dr. J. C. Hanchett, medical director of the society, says that in his early years of medical practice it was a frequent jest for some patient to tell him that he thought the Chinese method of paying his physician for keeping him well was the correct method for a physician to collect for his services, rather than the prevailing custom of charging him when he was ill. Few of us realized at that time how soon we would be following this Chinese custom to the extent of advocating at least one health examination each year for everyone.

The following extract is from the December issue of Medical Insurance:

"Physical examinations necessary. More and more physicians are urging periodic examinations as the most important step in the preservation of health. In fact, this is being recommended as the most essential step toward maintaining that state of health so necessary to the enjoyment of life as well as life's preservation beyond the average period of longevity."

"Physical examinations at stated periods are a safeguard against the encroachment of disease. They show the weakness of the body and the unguarded points of attack of incipient diseases. They enable the individual to be on the aggressive, rather than on the defensive, in preventing successful attacks upon the physical system. Regular physical examinations are the scientific way of keeping fit as against the old haphazard way of waiting until the patient is down and at least partially disabled for the combat with the disease enemy. Gradually we are learning in medicine that 'an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.'"

EDITORIAL ANONYMITY

FOR a few hours in Louisville the other night Harrison Robertson emerged from his anonymity as chief editorial writer for the Courier-Journal, says the New York Times. He was the guest of honor at a banquet which his associate gave to mark the completion of his half century on the paper. Still vigorous, enthusiastic and as distinguished a stylist as in the days when his work was so often mistaken for that of his famous editor, Henry Watterson, Mr. Robertson dismissed laments upon the nameless character of his life's labors with the following:

I realize that 50 years of my life lie buried in the editorial columns of the Courier-Journal's musty files. . . . My consolation is that while the newspaper dies physically every day, and with it dies what we have written into it; its spirit, if we have endowed it with a spirit, is undying; its character, which is all that counts, survives.

The sincere newspaper worker finds this a true expression of his creed. In no other profession is there a more unselfish code. Few in Louisville know of Mr. Robertson, as few in New York city knew of Frank Cobb of the World, but the knowledge that they offered leadership in thought to thousands to whom editors are but a few printed words was what they thrived upon.

IF STOPPED

"WHAT would be the reaction upon the cost of living if advertising ceased and its beneficent force were stopped?" This question, asked by the Fourth Estate, provides much food for rumination.

It is an interesting conjecture. Advertising largely takes the place of personal selling effort, which is very much more expensive. A California editor cogitating on the possibility of a cessation of advertising says:

"It would mean that our railroad trains would be thronged with salesmen whose homeward bound mail would carry fewer orders, all of smaller volume than now."

"Distribution upon the present scale would be impossible. Manufacturing would fall off, with a consequent decrease in labor demand. Jobbers would find their business proportionally limited. Retailers would make fewer and slower turnovers. Prices of all commodities would take a rise that would make war prices and ante-war prices seem low by comparison."—Hennepin County Review.

TARIFF TINKERING

A GENERAL revision of the tariff is not to be desired this year, says the Anoka Herald. The proposed special session of congress if called by Mr. Hoover after his inauguration should be devoted to but one purpose, namely, farm relief.

Correction of certain items in the tariff schedule may well prove helpful to the farmer if they are confined to those commodities imported from abroad which compete with American farm produce or things manufactured from such produce.

Such a correction would tend to lift the farming business to a parity with other businesses.

Obviously a general revision increasing the tariff walls on all imports would leave the farmer no better off than he is at present.

The President-elect knows this as well as anybody and can be relied upon.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

WHEN Irene Robeline married Guinn Holden, the young and handsome Texas minister, she expected to win his love. Guinn, a year before, had married the beautiful blonde Lilith, a gay and coquettish girl, who boasted of her ability to win him. Lilith died at childbirth. For eighteen years Irene fought a secret battle to root out the "gold and white" ghost of Guinn's first wife. She slaved in the household on the slender salary of the preacher. She was a splendid mother to the second Lilith, who grew up with all the beauty of the first as well as a cold, selfish, spoiled character. Tina, Ross, Lundy and Patricia, Irene's children, were always secondary to Lilith with Holden. Tina wore her cast-off clothes and used her old books in college. After graduation Lilith became engaged to Roger Devereaux, son of wealthy parents. Later she postponed her marriage and persuaded her father to give her a year in New York studying voice with the $2,000 left him by a parish-tioner. She was ecstatically happy in the big city, especially after meeting Vivien Winthrop, who entertained her in her palatial home. Bill Chester, heir to millions, and engaged to an heiress, is attracted to Lilith, whose beauty is ravishing. Back home Tina is graduating from college and Irene suffers utmost humiliation when Guinn fails to give her a graduation present. Later Tina has a house party. Sheba, the colored cook, tells Roger Devereaux he has a "hoodoo." Dan Ripley, rich, young, handsome, returned from a trip, spends time with Tina, who works at her drawing and helps at home. Irene discovers that Tina is in love with Dan.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XL.

LILITH in New York was living in a state of mind that might be called imbecile optimism, though she did not think of it as that, nor did she call it faith. Lilith was not a religious person. She would have analyzed it as a rational confidence in her own charms and in her intelligence as to directing them. In the past, such assurance had been well founded, and so she had a blithe conviction that that agreeable state would continue. Lilith would have said that faith without work was dead, and while she was not keen for manual exertion, she had no prejudice against using her brains when that would rebound to her benefit. She was well aware that she had a good mind, one that had not been overtaken by any such inconsequentialities as college studies, so that it was keener and ready for use.

She had had healthy scorn for "ladies' studiosness," as having been senseless and unnecessary. Professors were only men, after all, those of them that weren't old maids, so that the immemorial wiles of a pretty girl could help even in acquiring a bachelor of arts degree. College had seemed more amusing than the paragonage, so she had spent four years at it, but for higher education in itself there was no lure for Lilith. Voice study, yes, because singing was an attractive accomplishment that gave a pretty girl a place of importance at the piano, that showed off graceful bare arms, permitted lovely, tapering fingers to stray over the keys, while young men leaned over the piano in attitudes of devotion, that allowed blue eyes to be uplifted roughly or sentimentally, as the mood of the song fitted. She knew that her voice was pleasing, with an odd power of excitation, able to evoke strange and heady emotions in her hearers, especially the young and masculine ones. That was a quaint thing about music, that a voice could convey to others passions, emotions, depths of desire or despair which the singer did not feel. Lilith could sing a love song and be aware of the electricity it shot through the young men bending attentively over the piano, yet be as cool as a scientist observing reactions in a test tube, so far as she herself was concerned.

She thought of herself as an electrical engineer, of a sort. She could play with fiery currents, yet never had her cool pink fingertips been even slightly scorched. Of guess I've got an asbestos heart, she told herself. "It's safe not to feel your yourself. Just as it's safer for an engineer driving a train not to be intoxicated," she mused. And yet thrills must be exciting and pleasurable—she felt oddly regretful at the loss of her immunity. But a cool heart and a clear head got a girl further along in the world.

"When a girl loves a man enough, she knows that things are only—possessions," the little clucking clock seemed to remind her. Well, that was all the paragonage knew about life. She would have other standards to judge by.

She thought less of love than most young girls did in their dreams of the future, because love had been something she had always had power to command at will, while money and social position had been denied her. So as she softly dropped to sleep, or as she roused in the morning, in that blissful state which young, untroubled health knows, that transition between waking and slumber, she filmed for herself fairy pictures of luxury and beauty, where not only would hearts be hers for her choice (that had always been so), but where great houses and pictures and gardens, lawns sloping down to cool lakes, yachts graceful as birds, all imaginable beauty that wealth could procure would be spread out before her. . . . And why not—since what girl could be more fitted to lend grace and charm to possessions than she, Lilith Holden?

Vivien Winthrop went to Switzerland soon after her house party, and Lilith missed her greatly, not only for her companionship, but for the social backing which the Winthrops had given her. But she was to come home in the Autumn, and she had made plans that should include Lilith in her pleasures. In early June the Deans, too, decided that a Summer in Europe was desirable, so Lilith was faced with the necessity to look out for herself. She couldn't afford to keep the little apartment alone, and besides that would not be advisable. For a Bohemian artist, yes, but for a girl who was aspiring to social success, no. She was canny enough to hunt a furnished room for herself in a quite respectable apartment, before she discussed the matter with anyone.

She confided her acuteness to Bill Chester one afternoon when he took her for a ride in his motorboat on the Hudson.

"If I don't plan for myself, the family will jerk me back to the paragonage—to the mercy of the Ladies' Aid, whose dispositions are sored, and to a set of deacons whose minds are moldy. I'll have to help with the Cradle Roll, and teach a class in Sunday school, and take up collections for foreign missions."

"Ghastly!" she agreed, with a shake of his handsome head, humor in his dark eyes. "Rise up and get moved, and then make 'em see how all right it is."

"I have a plausible pen." "I'll say you have! And a plausible tongue and eye!" His own eyes paid tribute to her ability.

"And I must finish my pleasure year. It shows a weak character, doesn't it, to start something and not see it through?"

"It's most immoral," he assured her, with a gay quirk of his boyish mouth.

"Of course, being this far away from my family simplifies things."

"I think families ought to be abolished," he declared with heat. "Or else separated by law. My mother tries to gobble up my life when I'm with her. Penalty of being the only child, you know. And my grandfather tries to make me over into his image."

"What's he like?" she asked with interest.

"He's a tall man, big, with white hair and a beaked nose and tired eyes, like a sick old eagle on a rock. Has a contempt for lesser birds, so that makes life mighty onerous for him."

"My mother, now, is a pretty parakeet, gay, talkative, loves to flit about."

"I think my mother was a bird of paradise," mused Lilith. "My stepmother is a dooryard hen, with a brood of chickens to cluck to."

"Sounds sort of comfortable." There was a hint of wistfulness in his tone, a sudden seriousness in his glance.

"You'd like her," Lilith said. "Everybody does, all the men especially. Every silly boy going up Fool Hill turns his mind inside out to her like a youngster spilling his rockets to show her his treasures. She can make him believe in himself, think he can do big things. Every tottery old man throws out his chest and crow taller as she lollies him. Makes him think he has done big things—even if he knows he hasn't, and never can."

"How does she manage it? I've never known anyone like that." (To Be Continued.)

Against Private Duck Passes

To Editor Brainerd Dispatch, Brainerd, Minn.
Dear Sirs:
Hunting a place to hunt. That is about all the average hunter can hunt now, although he pays for a hunting license.

There is a bill pending in the legislature introduced by Senator Sullivan of St. Cloud, to abolish private duck passes and hunting permits.

It is to the interest of every lover of this greatest of outdoor sports, to use every influence to make this bill a law, and to make this sport available to all who willingly pay for a license to do so. Why just give it to a few selfish and privileged ones.

From whom does the fish and game commission get its money, from the private duck pass and hunting permit owners or the hunting public as a whole? If only from the license fees of the former it wouldn't exist very long.

The only opposition sponsored to this bill is by a few gun clubs and not by the farmers at all.

I lived on a farm for 20 years, in the heart of a hunting country, and our farm was hunted by thousands of hunters. During that time we never had to repair any fences destroyed by hunters or patch up a cow that had been mutilated by them.

The selfish few are poor sports at any rate, much less if they want the farmers to fight their battle. It just shows what type of real "he men sportsmen" the organization is composed of.

SHARKEY FIGHTS SKILLFULLY AND DEFEATS STRIBLING

FAILS TO ADVANCE HIMSELF TOWARD CHAMPION'S GOAL

DOUBTFUL IF IT HAS ELIMINATED STRIBLING FROM THE HEAVYWEIGHT LISTS

SOUTHERNER HAS ALIBI OF DISLOCATED RIB AND ATTACK OF NEURITIS

By FRANK GETTY (United Press Sports Editor)

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 28.—The greatest sporting spectacle the southland ever saw turned out to be a tremendous success.

But the ten-round bout in Flamingo Park between Jack Sharkey of Boston and Young Stribling of Georgia, erstwhile contenders for the heavyweight championship of the world, was a sorry anti-climax.

The victory scored by Sharkey failed to advance the big Lithuanian towards the championship goal.

If the outcome of the battle, which drew 40,000 spectators to the park amidst the palms, served definitely to eliminate Young Stribling from the heavyweight lists, it will have accomplished something. But this is doubtful.

An alibi involving a dislocated rib and an attack of neuritis, prepared in advance, was being used today by the Stribling coterie to explain their young man's disappointing performance.

No sooner had Lou Magnolia, the third man in the ring and a far more aggressive individual than either of the contenders, raised Jack Sharkey's hand in token of victory, than "Pa" Stribling began to shout excuses for his husky young son.

Young Stribling probably will be back seeking important heavyweigh engagements as soon as his swollen nose subsides.

While Sharkey fought cleanly and skillfully against an opponent who was difficult to hit, the Bostonian still has to prove his true worth.

The fight was so disappointing what with Stribling backing away and holding and Sharkey failing to display any real class as a "killer," even against an opponent whom he outweighed by ten pounds, the Madison Square Garden may be content to pocket its $100,000 profit and turn elsewhere for logical contenders.

The fight was surprisingly close after all. Sharkey won the final round and with it the decision.

In the opinion of the writer, Sharkey deserved the verdict beyond question, although the scoring by rounds was four for Jack, three for Stribling, and three even.

Stribling's campaign of battle was to keep away from Sharkey as long as possible, and then to leap in with a heavy right or left swing to the head, ducking into a clinch if he missed.

"Pa" Stribling claimed that young W. L. could not use his left hand effectively because of the neuritis which set in following the dislocation of a rib last week.

"It was W. L.'s greatest fight. We were robbed of the decision," wailed the parents of the black-eyed southern boy.

Sharkey once known as the most valuable of heavyweights, had little to say.

"Stribling was faster and better than I had expected him to be," the Bostonian told the United Press.

Both Sharkey and Stribling, however, will have to prove their claim elsewhere.

The great venture undertaken by a tribute to Tex Rickard, turned out to be a tremendous financial success but the disappointing showing of the principals chosen for the affair means that the sporting world will remember them only in connection with the south's greatest show.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 28.—(UP)—Forty thousand people representing wealth of a couple of billion dollars, sat beneath the stars of Florida's winter sky last night and saw Jack Sharkey win a decision in ten rounds from W. L. Stribling, a hand some youth from Macon, Ga.

The elite of the winter colony was there. Brilliant sport clothes, gay in reds and greens, and luxuriant furs on graceful cloaks of white made up a fashion carnival.

The male contingent, including men whose fortunes run to many millions, came in tuxedos. So did Paulino Uzcudun, a boxer of some fame, and One-eyed Connolly, who never buys a ticket.

On one hand was Irene Castle McLaughlin, the George P. Putnam's, a New York, Rex Beach, the author Thomas J. Crowley and wife, of the New York Central railway Crowley family.

On the other there was Al Capone who made his name and fame in Chi

(By a Staff Correspondent) Crosby Armory, 3:15 P. M., Feb. 28.—Brainerd and Wadena were fighting it out here this afternoon to determine which team would enter the semi-finals of the 11th district basketball tournament.

Coach Warren Kasch's men looked mighty good as they trotted out on the tournament floor and went through their opening paces preliminary to the start of the game. They received an equal volume of cheers with Wadena.

The armory bleachers were filled, spectators realizing that this afternoon's game was the choice encounter of the day.

Wise and Hautala started out on the forward line with Paine at center and Foster and Fuller at the guard positions. Gabiou, Schuety and Goedderz were on the sidelines waiting to enter the fray at any time.

Lewis, of Moose Lake, ex-captain of the University of Minnesota basketball team, is handling the whistle as referee.

Fans recognized three of Brainerd's last year's championship team on the floor this afternoon. Wise, Fuller and Gabiou, and gave them loud cheers. Many are asking about Captain Harold Guin. The indomitable center of last year has been unable to play a game this year because of sickness during the early part of the season.

The hundreds of fans are wondering what Brainerd will do today, wondering what any team can do under the circumstances which have confronted the Brainerd team this season in the lack of practice facilities.

After the Brainerd-Wadena game Little Falls will meet Class B team at 4 o'clock.

Tonight Pine River will meet Staples at 8 o'clock and Crosby-Ironton will meet Aitkin, winners over Motley last evening, at 9 o'clock.

The Tired Ones

Veteran Giant Pitcher Keeps Pace with Youngsters

Jack Scott Regarded as Regular on McGraw Baseballers

LIKE the "old gal" who insists on playing around with the younger set, just to show how young she is, Jack Scott, Philie cast-off, is cavorting around the training lot with the liveliest of the rookies.

That name cast-off has a vicious sound, but Jack, at age 35, only one year ago was sent to the minors—Toledo, to be exact—by the Phillies, as all through. He hadn't been there long before the Yankees came along with a dazzling offer for the veteran. It was ordained, however, that he return to the big show under John McGraw through one of those arrangements that exists between the Giants and Toledo.

He had served two previous terms with the Giants, doing a nice job of starting and relieving. Weighing 205 and standing six-one, Jack has always known how and why to take care of his physical being and hard training isn't work for him. Scotty spends his winters raising hogs and reports ready to hurl 'em as fast as some pitchers who have a couple of weeks' work under their belts.

Perhaps his last one has, lost some of its hop and his curve is nothing to boast about. He still has control, courage and knowledge of batters. That's a lot more than many pitchers can boast of and ought to come in handy to the Giants.

Anyhow, you've got to take your hat off to the boy. He's getting away with it and more than keeping to the pace of the youngster in spite of his graying hairs.

GUS SONNENBURG

AFTER TAKING ONE FALL FROM LEWIS THE STRANGLER WAS DISQUALIFIED WHEN HE FAILED TO RETURN TO THE MAT AFTER HE HAD BEEN BUTTED THROUGH THE ROPES SEVEN TIMES BY GUS.

WELL BE WITH YOU, GUS.

HE'S EXPECTED TO INTEREST A LOT OF THE FIGHTING COATED LADS IN THE SPORT.

By QUIN HALL. NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that the wrestling game has as many knockers as there are in an Eskimo's tuxedo, the sport seems to go merrily on and the wrestling gentry seem to survive.

In fact a lot of the catch-as-catch-caners amassed sizable fortunes on the mat and any number of second-rate grapplers who have hairy chests and bulging biceps are garnering a much better livelihood out of the racket than they would if they decided to take a job as a snow shoveler in Florida or California. This would lead the layman to believe that there are still quite a few fans scattered about who take their wrestling seriously. Why the anvil chorus should concentrate so much on wrestling has never been fully brought out. Other sports are subject to the hammer tossers from time to time, but wrestling seems to be an all-year-round target for the boys who like to holler "frameup."

Every so often, despite the knocks, something happens in the wrestling ranks which demands attention. Just recently a college-bred heavyweight grappler half-Nelsoned his way into prominence by upsetting the king of the herd, Ed "Strangler" Lewis, thereby gaining for himself the title of heavyweight wrestling champ off the universe.

Gus Sonnenburg, who was a football tackle at Dartmouth for one year and at the University of Detroit for three, was the fellow who unseated Lewis from the throne that he's been occupying pretty regularly over a long string of years. Gus pulled the crown off the "Strangler's" brow in their second meeting, which was staged in Boston early in January. Sonnenburg had taken the first fall with his famous "flying tackle"—which sounds like something held over from football days—in 29 minutes and 46 seconds. Coming in for the second fall he tried the same tactics on the "Strangler" and butted the Kansas City fellow seven times in rapid succession, forcing the champion to fall or crawl outside the ropes to escape punishment. Each time he sought safety he was ordered to return by Referee Leon Burnak and when he failed to crawl back after the seventh butt he was counted out of his title.

Gus may be a "dash in the pan," or he may be the real goods. Time will tell. He weighs about 200 pounds, although he is only 5 feet 6 inches tall. He depends almost entirely upon his regular football tackle in all of his bouts, and had Lewis groggy in their first match, when the champion sidestepped one of Sonnenburg's lunges and

Gus took a header through the ropes to the cement floor below the platform and knocked himself out of a chance to get the title.

Gus isn't the first collegian to flash into wrestling prominence. A few years ago Wayne (Big) Munn, the University of Nebraska linesman, made a bid for wrestling fame and fared rather well for a short spell but he faded out of the headlines eventually. Munn was not an experienced grappler and depended on picking his opponents up in his arms and shaking them down on their backs. With enough force to break the bones of an average citizen, he was a good hold while it lasted but some of the boys were quick to figure out a block and, after that, it wasn't such easy sailing for Munn.

Sonnenburg's entry into the championship ranks is a good thing for the business of wrestling. He's bound to attract a raccoon-coated audience and that, the promoters feel, will elevate the sport to a higher plane. Lewis has had the title long enough to become financially independent and it's time some of the others are given a shot at the grab bag. But these wrestling champs have a way of performing in obscure places and any minute word may be flashed that Gus no longer is king.

Lewis is angling for another shot at the collegian before that happens.

SHARKEY FIGHTS SKILLFULLY AND DEFEATS STRIBLING

FAILS TO ADVANCE HIMSELF TOWARD CHAMPION'S GOAL

DOUBTFUL IF IT HAS ELIMINATED STRIBLING FROM THE HEAVYWEIGHT LISTS

SOUTHERNER HAS ALIBI OF DISLOCATED RIB AND ATTACK OF NEURITIS

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 28.—The greatest sporting spectacle the southland ever saw turned out to be a tremendous success.

But the ten-round bout in Flamingo Park between Jack Sharkey of Boston and Young Stribling of Georgia, erstwhile contenders for the heavyweight championship of the world, was a sorry anti-climax.

The victory scored by Sharkey failed to advance the big Lithuanian towards the championship goal.

If the outcome of the battle, which drew 40,000 spectators to the park amidst the palms, served definitely to eliminate Young Stribling from the heavyweight lists, it will have accomplished something. But this is doubtful.

An alibi involving a dislocated rib and an attack of neuritis, prepared in advance, was being used today by the Stribling coterie to explain their young man's disappointing performance.

No sooner had Lou Magnolia, the third man in the ring and a far more aggressive individual than either of the contenders, raised Jack Sharkey's hand in token of victory, than "Pa" Stribling began to shout excuses for his husky young son.

Young Stribling probably will be back seeking important heavyweight engagements as soon as his swollen nose subsides.

While Sharkey fought cleanly and skillfully against an opponent who was difficult to hit, the Bostonian still has to prove his true worth.

The fight was so disappointing what with Stribling backing away and holding and Sharkey failing to display any real class as a "killer," even against an opponent whom he outweighed by ten pounds, that Madison Square Garden may be content to pocket its $100,000 profit and turn elsewhere for logical contenders.

The fight was surprisingly close after all. Sharkey won the final round and with it the decision.

In the opinion of the writer, Sharkey deserved the verdict beyond question, although the scoring by rounds was four for Jack, three for Stribling, and three even.

Stribling's campaign of battle was to keep away from Sharkey as long as possible, and then to leap in with a heavy right or left swing to the head, ducking into a clinch if he missed.

"Pa" Stribling claimed that young W. L. could not use his left hand effectively because of the neuritis which set in following the dislocation of a rib last week.

"It was W. L.'s greatest fight. We were robbed of the decision," wailed the parents of the black-eyed southern boy.

Sharkey once known as the most volatile of heavyweights, had little to say.

"Stribling was faster and better than I had expected him to be," the Bostonian told the United Press.

Both Sharkey and Stribling, however, will have to prove their claim elsewhere.

The great venture undertaken as a tribute to Tex Rickard, turned out to be a tremendous financial success but the disappointing showing of the principals chosen for the affair means that the sporting world will remember them only in connection with the south's greatest show.

Gus may be a "dash in the pan," or he may be the real goods. Time will tell. He weighs about 200 pounds, although he is only 5 feet 6 inches tall. He depends almost entirely upon his regular football tackle in all of his bouts, and had Lewis groggy in their first match, when the champion sidestepped one of Sonnenburg's lunges and

Gus took a header through the ropes to the cement floor below out of a chance to get the title. Gus isn't the first collegian to flash into wrestling prominence. A few years ago Wayne (Big) Munn, the University of Nebraska linesman, made a bid for wrestling fame and fared rather well for a short spell but he faded out of the headlines eventually. Munn was not an experienced grappler and depended on picking his opponents up in his arms and slamming them down on their backs. With enough force to break bones of an average citizen, it was a good hold while it lasted but some of the boys were quick to figure out a block and, after that, it wasn't such easy sailing for Munn.

Sonnenburg's entry into the championship ranks is a good thing for the business of wrestling. He's bound to attract a rascally audience and that, the promoters feel, will elevate the sport to a higher plane. Lewis has had the title long enough to become financially independent and it's time some of the others are given a shot at the grab bag. But these wrestling champs have a way of performing in obscure places and any minute word may be flashed that Gus no longer is king.

Lewis is angling for another shot at the collegian before that happens.

CAGO HAS KNOWN SINCE
HAYMARKET RIOTS

Chicago, Feb. 28.—(UP)—A gangster's "moll," protected by detectives and police against the intimidation that has ruined other witnesses, held a key position today in an investigation that may solve the biggest crime Chicago has known since the Haymarket riots forty years ago.

Even the newspapers have sworn to shield the identity of the pretty girl who was arrested with Jack McGurn, Capone machine gunner, in his "hideout" in the Stevens hotel overlooking the lake. McGurn has been identified as one of the gunmen who massacred seven "Bugs" Moran gangsters in a north side garage on Feb. 14.

The girl who was arrested with him in a suite only three floors below the headquarters of the state's attorney's assistants assigned to the massacre inquiry, is said to know the whole story of the mass murders.

The "moll's" name was given as Miss Louise Rolfe but newspaper photographers agreed not to take her picture and reporters agreed not to try to interview her. She will be held until police are certain she has told all she knows.

Miss Rolfe and McGurn, former prize fighter and known as one of the best machine gunners in gangland, have kept to their rooms in the hotel ever since Feb. 12 when McGurn came back from Florida where he served as Al Capone's bodyguard.

His arrest followed finding of evidence to support the theory that Capone's gang was responsible for the massacre.

Through the bars of his private cell today McGurn ridiculed the police for connecting him with the crime. They had taken his guns but allowed him to keep a big diamond ring.

"This job was done by a squad of detectives," Jack said. "I think they would get farther by investigating the squads than arresting innocent men like me."

"I'm shot at enough without getting a bum rap like this."

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

"Luckies have helped me win the laurel crown of my musical career—singing in opera. Stage presence demands a slim, youthful figure. Rich foods cannot tempt me, I light a Lucky and stay slender. The toasted flavor of a Lucky soothes the craving for goodies. Then, too, a Lucky never irritates my throat. Even, after smoking many, my voice is still clear."

HOPE HAMPTON

The modern common sense way—reach for a Lucky instead of a fattening sweet. Everyone is doing it—men keep healthy and fit, women retain a trim figure. Lucky Strike, the finest tobaccos, skillfully blended, then toasted to develop a flavor which is a delightful alternative for that craving for fattening sweets.

Toasting frees Lucky Strike from impurities. 20,679 physicians recognize this when they say Luckies are less irritating than other cigarettes. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

Note: Authorities attribute the enormous increase in Cigarette smoking to the improvement in the process of Cigarette manufacture by the application of heat. It is true that during 1928, Lucky Strike Cigarettes showed a greater increase than all other Cigarettes combined. This surely confirms the public's confidence in the superiority of Lucky Strike.

"I light a Lucky and

Hope Hampton,
Famous Star of the Opera,
Stage and Screen.

"Luckies have helped me win the laurel crown of my musical career—singing in opera.
Stage presence demands a slim, youthful figure. Rich foods cannot tempt me. I light a Lucky and stay slender. The toasted flavor of a Lucky soothes the craving for goodies.
Then, too, a Lucky never irritates my throat.
Even, after smoking many, my voice is still clear."

HOPE HAMPTON

The modern common sense way—reach for a Lucky instead of a fattening sweet. Everyone is doing it—men keep healthy and fit, women retain a trim figure. Lucky Strike, the finest tobaccos, skilfully blended, then toasted to develop a flavor which is a delightful alternative for that craving for fattening sweets.

Toasting frees Lucky Strike from impurities.
20,679 physicians recognize this when they say Luckies are less irritating than other cigarettes. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

Note: Authorities attribute the enormous increase in Cigarette smoking to the improvement in the process of Cigarette manufacture by the application of heat. It is true that during 1928, Lucky Strike Cigarettes showed a greater increase than all other Cigarettes combined. This surely confirms the public's confidence in the superiority of Lucky Strike.

Criticism
A person who cannot stand criticism, who is always on the self-defensive, is almost invariably the person who is intensely personal and who relates everything to himself, states a student of life in the Woman's Home Companion.
